Sixth Grade Final Music Theory Test

The first part of the 6th grade year in band will consist of a unit on the basic fundamentals of music theory and instrument introductions. At the end of the Music Theory Unit in September, 6th grade students will take a test on all theory material covered in the unit. Students must achieve a score of 85% on this test to participate in mouthpiece testing and be given an instrument assignment. Students scoring lower than 85% will have ONE opportunity for a re-take. The class period before the scheduled re-take will be used as a review for all students to help prepare the students who need to re-take the test. There will also be a time scheduled after school for students to receive individual help before the re-take. The parents of students scoring lower than 85% on the re-take will be contacted, and the process will begin to have those students' schedules changed.
